Jollification Marks Close of Campaign Which Assures Richmond of Big Hotel

Five hundred and ninety four subscribers, and $205,650 is the result of the community hotel campaign which came to a close last evening, at a jollification dinner held in the basement of the Memorial hall building.

The meeting was one of enthusiasm from beginning to end, the campaign workers were satisfied with the results that had been achieved, and one thing was demonstrated nothwithstanding the prediction of the "glooms", that the people of Richmond are united and can accomplish anything they undertake, just so long as there is good team work.

Ground for the new hotel will be broken within the next sixty days, and from that time on the construction of the new building will be pushed, and it is hoped that the new hotel will be ready to be thrown open to the public within ten months.

As the sentiment was expressed at the jollification many times by speakers, the success of the big undertaking that has just been put over, and which assures Richmond of a first class hotel, is not due to any

Tinning Speaks On Law Enforcement At Church Meeting

Every citizen who considers himself a good citizen was urged to do everything in his power to aid in the enforcement of the law by District Attorney A. B. Tinning, while speaking before the meeting of the Richmond Church Fellowship at the Wesley Methodist Episcopal church, on the subject of "Law Enforcement" last night. The district attorney made a strong appeal to everyone in the great problem of law enforcement and his talk was received with enthusiasm on the part of the listeners.

The question of the proposed ordinance before the city council for a ban on Sunday dancing and roller skating was discussed from every angle, and it was decided to do every thing possible to have the ordinance passed.

It was decided to suspend the meeting of the Fellowship during the months of July and August. Meetings will be resumed on September 1. Last night's meeting was presided over by Dr. W. W. Giberson, president, and he called upon Fred Newsom to introduce the speaker of the evening.

A special musical program was rendered by local talent and it furnished much enjoyment to the audience. The ladies of the General Aid of the Wesley church served the sumptuous dinner for the members of the Church Fellowship.

RECENT PHOTO OF AMUNDSEN, AND SUPPLY BASE 9 DEGREES FROM POLE THAT MAY MEAN EXPLORER'S SALVATION

The above photograph shows the food cache built on Ellesmere Land nine degrees from the North Pole, by Pat Lee, which may prove a haven to Captain Roald Amundsen and his flyer companion. Pat Lee accompanied the Canadian government vessel Arctic to Etah and there went abroad the Bowdoin, after a decision was reached to establish a post still further north on the Ellesmere Land side of Smith Land side of Smith Sound. This cache will be the nearest source of supply to Amundsen if he is lost, and in the event of the explorer attempting to reach Greenland from Eureka Sound it will be of the utmost assistance. The photo of Captain Amundsen was taken when he sailed from America to prepare for his flight to the pole.

DR. HINKLEY HAS MARVEL OF SCIENCE

Dr. A. B. Hinkley has installed a very costly Nerve Pressure Detector. The very latest and most scientific instument known to the Chiropractic profession.

The writer of this article was in Dr. Hinkley's office yesterday and had a demonstration of the new invention which is a scientific marvel.

The appratus is electrically controlled and locates the slightest misplaced vetebra. The peculiar part of the machine is that the patient locates the trouble at the same time the doctor does.

After the seat of the trouble is located an x-ray tells the doctor just how the vertebra should be adjusted.

Dr. Hinkley should do a volume of business now that his office is so scientifically equipped.

Red Propaganda Now Circulated Would Amaze U. S.

(By Universal Service)

ST. PAUL (Minn.), June 9. The American people would be amazed if they knew the amount of revolutionary propaganda now being circulated throughout this country by "foreign influences," Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg declared here today in a speech at the Norse-American centennial.

He declared that the danger to American institutions by this form of propaganda "is not imaginary." He said it is coming from foreign and alien sources.

This was Kellogg's first important speech since he returned as Ambassador to the Court of St. James to be Secretary of State, under President Coolidge. After praising the constitutional guarantees contained in the bill of rights, Secretary Kellogg said in his speech today:

"I do not think there is much danger that the American people will deliberately, by amendments to the constitution, take away these rights, destroy the fundamental principals on which our Government is founded or place it with in the power of any legislative body to do but there is no doubt that these principals of our constitution are being assaulted from two sources:

"First, the open, as well as secret propagandists who advocate the overthrow of the Government and the substitution of a class tyranny.

"Second, a considerable body of our citizens who in the name of liberty and reforms are impatient of the constitutional restrictions and by insidious approaches and attacks would destroy these guarantees of personal liberty."

MAN RECOVERS HEARING HERE IN PLANE DIVE

E. L. Barger of Berkeley Finds Hearing Restored After Sudden Airplane Dive

FLYS OVER RICHMOND FIELD

No Longer Deaf After Plane Drops 3,500 Feet From 11,000 Altitude

Again the marvels of the air have made themselves manifest in Richmond. The method of curing deafness by airplane was effectively carried out at the Richmond airfield yesterday afternoon.

E. L. Barger, sales manager for the Auburn Motor Sales company of 2612 Shattuck avenue, Berkeley, and formerly of the Curry Auto Sales company of Richmond, came to the field in Richmond yesterday afternoon and chartered the five passenger plane piloted by Jimmie Angel of the Allinio Aircraft company, for a flight.

Barger has been very hard of hearing for the past ten years, it being necessary for a speaker to talk in a loud tone to be heard. For the past two months he has had an annoying ringing in his ears.

Angel and Barger attained an altitude of about 11,000 feet over the field yesterday, when the pilot turned the plane into a nose dive of approximately 3,500 feet. When the fliers finally reached the earth, Barger was astonished and highly elated that he could easily hear an ordinary conversation, and the ringing in his ears had totally disappeared.

Barger was overjoyed at again having his hearing restored and stated that he would soon take another similar flight with a friend who is also hard of hearing in the hope that his friend might also regain the sense of hearing.

Shinola Shines To Be Revived By Elks Lodge

Of great interest to local Elks is the announcement made at the meeting of the local antlered order in the temple last night, that the Shinola Shines are to resume activities again. Prior to two years ago, the Shines were one of the most popular groups in Richmond never failing to supply entertainment for an audience. They have been out of "business" for the last two years. But Past Exalted Ruler A. C. Lang, has prepared a new ritual and the organization is meeting Friday night to get started on a new play, which is expected to be ready within two months.

One thousand persons are expected to attend the annual picnic to be given by the Richmond Elks on Sunday, June 28, at Ramona park, near Danville. R. H. Spiersch is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements and he and his assistants are preparing ample ammusement for all who attend the picnic.

Flag day is to be observed by all the East Bay Elks on Sunday, June 14, in a joint session at Lakeside park, Oakland.

Arrangements are nearing completion for the large body of local members to visit the new San Francisco home on next Wednesday evening. Exalted Ruler, James F. Hoey, was the presiding officer at last night's meeting.

Five Elk Lodges Unite to Observe Flag Day Sunday At Lakeside Park

A special musical program has been arranged by Paul Steindorf and his Oakland Municipal Band. Vocal numbers will be rendered by Madame J. Raccan Talbot and the Elks Flag Day Quartet.

TO INSTALL AMPLIFIERS

The R. O. T. C. of Alameda will raise the flag. A system of amplifiers will be installed. The Elks have a short Flag Day ritual which will be presented. Al J. Lacoste of Oakland will act as exalted ruler, Luther A. Dunlay of Berkeley as esteemed leading knight, James F. Hoey of Richmond as esteemed loyal knight, Edwin P. Jackson of Pittsburg as esteemed lecturing knight and Dr. P. M. Willemin of Alameda as esquire.

Plans and specifications for the sewers in the Villa Nova tract were adopted by the board of trustees and proceedings for the work will probably be started next Monday night.

BUYING AT HOME

Most Americans are convinced of the fact that it is better to buy American goods than those made in foreign countries, where American made products can be obtained, and it is well to remember that it is equally as sound business sense to buy in one's home city, rather than in some nearby metropolis, when the goods can be had at home.

For just as we want to make and keep America the most prosperous nation in the world, so we should desire to keep our home community prosperous and progressive.

It is the home business and professional man who helps to keep the community going. He pays his share of local taxes which go to keep up schools and hospitals and to make public improvements, and every dollar spent at home increases business and consequently the public as well as the commercial revenue of the city.

No one ever saw a clean, progressive, happy community which did not have active, prosperous and healthy business institutions. It is the town with the best business which has the best schools, the best hospitals and the most modern improvements.

No agency for promoting these progressive conditions is more important than the home newspaper. The local editor is constantly urging his readers to spend their money at home and so build up the community in which all his readers must live. He practices what he preaches and refuses to accept the advertisements of competing business in other communities. Therfore it is necessary to keep up the local newspaper if we are to have the right kind of progressive and prosperous American communities.

WHAT DAWES OPPOSES

Vice-President Dawes, in his campaign against filibustering in the senate, makes it clear that what he objects to is not legitimate debate, but interruption of the business of congress by insignificant minorities, in palpably obstructive tactics.

The senate has been from the beginning of the government a forum of debate in which great service to the American people has been performed by thorough discussion of great national issues and problems. With its smaller membership the senate, rather than the house, is the body in which public questions are debated most exhaustively. When an important public question is at stake, it is essential that all the light possible should be thrown upon it. The service rendered to the nation by the senators who participated in the great senate debate on the Leagu of Nations was historic.

There is no appreciable public sentiment in favor of curtailing legitimate debate in the senate. The feeling against the wasting of time by meaningless harangues about nothing in particular is strong. The abuse, and not the legitimate use, of the greater freedom of debate essential to an effective senate, accounts for the demand that the one man or the five-man filibuster in matters of minor moment should cease. In calling attention to the abuse of the senate rules Vice-President Dawes is doing the nation a service. The most dangerous foes of legitimate debate in the senate are the selfish demagogues who, from unworthy motives, pervert the senate rules to purely obstructive uses.

FIRST IN THE LAND

The thought that the people already in the United States, native and foreign born, citizens, and aliens, have a first right to an opportunity to make a living and secure a foothold here as against a new immigration, was one of the big things which the president drove home in his address to the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Speaking of the new immigration law, he called the attention of his audience to the fact that but for this law we would, in the last four years, have received an additional eight millions of people from Europe, all competing against the people already here in the battle for a livelihood. Inasmuch as many of them, by reason of the straitened conditions in which they would reach us, would by force of circumstances, be ready to accept any wage offered for the purpose of securing bread, a depreciation in the general wage scale would have been inevitable. Sound common sense as usual is back of the president's words.

Immigration should be stopped entirely—at any rate the immigration of the laboring class—until those already here can secure a fair days wage for a fair days work, which they are not by any means getting now.

At the instance of local clergymen, Sunday funerals have been banned in Miami, Fla., on the ground that they keep folks from church and Sunday School, also deprive hard-working undertakers of their day of rest. All citizens are requested to do their dying accordingly.

It cost Los Angeles $125,000 to destroy 40,000 rats during the first four months of this year.

People who brag about their ancestors are not very enthusiastic over evolution.

ANIMALS ON YOUR SHOES

Some of the newest shoe ornaments are little animales made of some bone-like composition, and colored an irregular brown. These, of course, are used on the toe of the shoe, instead of a buckle. They are really quite effective.

Another new and interesing shoe trimming consists of little ornaments made of bits of leather arranged in a sort of whorl. This, too, is used instead of a buckle at the toe of the slipper.

The Bread and Butter Wife

by Violet Dare

AUTHOR OF "The Husband Tamer," "My Matrimonial Vacation," etc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

SALLY LEE has gone to Atlantic City as public stenographer in a fashionable hotel after quarreling with

TOM PORTER, her husband of a year, who resents her working even though she does it in order that he may live more comfortably.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

XLI—TWO CAN PLAY

SALLY hurried back to her little furnished room, her mind in a whirl. The glimpse she had of Miss Barker's lonely life convinced her that she never could follow in her footsteps. She wanted to live not as Miss Barker had lived, going from place to place as Granville's secretary, recording his achievements, reminding him of his duties, but having a place and people to call her own.

VIOLET DARE

She realized then that she would never go on with her plans. She would tell Granville tomorrow that it was impossible for her to take the position. But what could she do? How could she live?

When she reached home she clutched a letter addressed to her and saw with delight that it was from Emily. "Next best thing to having a letter from Tom," she mused.

Tearing it open, she read eagerly, seeking mention of his name. It was there all right, but not just as she had expected.

"Tom came over to dinner last night," Emily wrote. "And it seemed awfully good to have him with us again. He isn't looking awfully well, but then what can you expect of a man who has no one around to look after him? He has that seedy, bachelor-widower look of a man who has no one constantly dogging his footsteps about having his clothes pressed and getting a new hat.

"I think it is just heart-breaking that you and he can't get along, but of course you have a perfect right to live as you want to, and if Tom can't give you all the luxuries you want I suppose it is much better for you to earn them for yourself.

"At first I suppose it was awfully hard on him, but I guess he is getting over it now. He brought a lovely girl with him—Claire Evans. She seemed just crazy about the apartment, helped me to get dinner and played with the baby. You could see that even though she was a working girl she really was domestic by choice. Tom was very attentive. I guess he likes her quite well.

"It really seemed awfully funny seeing someone else in your place, but I suppose we will all have to get used to the idea since you didn't like things here."

"Oh, the cat!" Sally exclaimed, flinging the letter to the floor and bursting into angry tears. "She just wanted to make me unhappy."

Her worries of a minute before were all forgotten in the shock of finding that Tom—her Tom—was going around with another girl. She sat there dejectedly staring at the pages of the letter scattered on the floor until a knock at the door interrupted her.

"Come in," she called wearily, hardly interested in who it might be.

"I've come to beg your pardon," a deep voice said hesitantly, and she glanced up to see the bulky figure of David Stone framed in the doorway. "I couldn't go away without telling you how sorry I am to have offended you."

Sally looked up startled. She recalled the bitterness of their last meeting and a shiver of terror shook her frail little body.

"I was a blind old fool to think that you might care for me," he went on, pulling a spindly old chair over and sitting down facing Sally. "And I'm afraid that in my anger I said many things I did not mean. Won't you forgive me. I am really most unhappy."

Sally nodded. What did it matter anyhow? The past was full of mistakes.

"Isn't there anything I can do for you? Please let me help. I feel so terribly bringing you to this."

Sally tried to pull herself together, to assure him that there was nothing he could do, but her voice shook.

"Please—won't you tell me, at least, what is the matter?"

He seemed a different person from the one who had tried to bully her only a few days ago into divorcing her husband and marrying him, and she marvelled at his change of heart.

Tom was very attentive.

"No one can help me," Sally finally mustered up courage to tell him. "That's what is the matter now. I've allowed myself to be led until I've lost my husband. And he's the only person in the world I care about," she sobed.

"Oh, so that's it." Stone got up and patted her on the shoulder.

Finally he spoke with an effort.

"Don't give in, Sally," he told her. "Remember what I told you one time? Whatever you want in life is worth fighting for. At that time I didn't know that it was your husband you wanted. I thought you were trying to get away, to forget him. But the advice still holds good. Go back and put up a fight. I've fought for you and lost. But I am sure that whatever you want you will get."

Sally glanced up at him gratefully, smiling quizzically through her tears.

"Oh, I will try," she promised him. "And I'll never forget your kindness."

"New Toys" with Richard Barthelmess Starts Today at California Theatre

Richard Barthelmess and Mary Hay in "New Toys"

Richard Barthelmess and his wife, Mary Hay, are singularly fitted to play the young married couple of "New Toys," the young star's latest First National picture now at the California theatre.

That is, they are suited in the fact that they are really and truly a young married couple. The young husband and wife of "New Toys" go through a lot of comic domestic tribulations over the fact that the wife longs for a stage career and chafes a bit at the restrictions of matrimony. Here, of course, the Barthelmesses had to use a bit of imagination, for they are exceedingly happy in their own marriage, with a charming home and a lovely baby to hold their interests.

Miss Hay has appeared on the stage considerably since her marriage. She scored in "Sally," was a big hit in "Marjolaine," and last season starred in "Mary Jane McKane." Naturally she has always longed to appear with her husband and, with the purchase of "New Toys," the opportunity came.

Other features on the same program include "Sit Tight," a comedy riot of laughs; "International News;" Larry Canelo, at the organ.

Labor Demand Is On Increase Here

Demand for labor, skilled and unskilled is greater this month than it has been during any preceding month this year, according to L. C. Dexter, secretary of the employment bureau of the Richmond Builders' Exchange. It is doubtful that the labor supply of this city will be able to cope with the tremendous increase in building activitiy during this month. The employment bureau has already found it imperative to call to the Oakland employment bureau for men this month, in order to meet the increased labor demand.

A total of 214 men were given employment during the month of May. They were placed in the following lines of work: Laborers, skilled and unskilled, 130; carpenters, 30; plasterers 6; brickmasons 4; electricians 3; painters, 10; hod-carriers, 8; bathers 3; millmen 4; cabinet makers 2; auto mechanics 4; miscellaneous 13.

"His Hour" Glyn Story Here Today

From every walk of life they come into pictures, some act, some to direct and some to engage in the technical end. That is brought home forcibly in "His Hour," Elinor Glyn's latest production, which is coming to the Richmond Theatre today for two days.

A bonafide Prince; a General who actually served as aide de campe to the former Grand Duke Nicholas; a Duchess born to the title and numerous other brilliant members of the old Russian court circle all play in "His Hour" which is a Metro-Goldwyn picture.

Royalty appears in roles that are really a part of them; wearing the jewels and ermine to which they were so long accustomed and which were so melodramatically snatched from them during the World War.

"His Hour," which Mrs. Glyn wrote while visiting the royal family in St. Petersburg, is a colorful drama of love and pathos, and is brimful of the brilliance always to be found in Mrs. Glyn's writings.

The two featured players of this vivid production are those Mrs. Glyn has selected as the screen's most romantic lovers, Aileen Pringle and John Gilbert. "His Hour" was directed by King Vidor and is a Louis B. Mayer presentation.

Other features on the same program include "Lion's Whiskers," a Mack Sennett comedy; "Prizma," a screen magazine.

Dear Sir:

As a citizen of Richmond, and the mother of three children whom I expect to raise here, I feel it my duty to voice my opinion concerning the resolution presented to the city council by the Church Fellowship last Monday night.

There is no objection on the part of any to the ordinance governing the keeping clean of all premises in the business and residential sections of our city—well all take pride in its beautiful appearance; but should we not be more, or at least as much, concerned with the moral and spiritual welfare of our youth, than we are with the physical?

The honorable city council has in their power the right to allow or forbid the continuance of the desecration of the Sabbath in our city, and I therefore plead with them to weigh carefully and prayerfully the results of their votes upon this question.

Very respectfully,
MRS. FANNIE H. DORAN

CHAPTER IX

Miss Rosalind Blake and Miss Caroline Dunne lived in extraordinary modesty—speaking locally—at The Cottage. They possessed no motor-car to prove their respectability; no money or rank to prove their social value; no young man to attract the girls and widows; no youth or beauty of their own to attract the men. Therefore they were not considered worth considering. Frankly over fifty, the fact failed to upset their digestions. Owing to a more practical domestic nature and pince-nez, Miss Blake gave the erroneous impression of being the elder. She was also of smaller build, less robust, and so accustomed to fatigue after exertion that it had become a habit. After a round of golf she went home to lie down. Refreshed by a nap, she settled into a chair and knitted jumpers all evening until, again sleepy, she went to bed. While knitting she discussed the doings of the Royal Family, the Aristocracy, and the Stage.

Caroline, on the other hand, tramped round the links rather fiercely, muttering thunderously over bad lies, the thunder breaking into loud claps when brooks or bunkers caught her ball. Caroline was very explosive—a kind of semi-active, semi-dormant volcano. She usually returned home in eruption over some matter or—more often—person, and lava flowed around The Cottage for an hour or so. Then, with diminishing rumbles, and spurts of flame or smoke, the volcano died down without doing any damage. Caroline decided to write a book some day, and put everybody who annoyed her into it, as Dante is said to have put his enemies into his "Inferno."

Leo found this pair of spinsters easier of approach and comprehension than the dwellers in marble halls. Frequently, after her little shocks, she turned to them. Here she could find golf and companionship—not saturated with Susie's domesticity—that would not annoy Harry. Leo, too clumsy and inconsequent, had reached that milestone in life: she sought not to annoy another. While driving her car to The Cottage, the morning after their little scene, she reviewed the situation dispassionately.

Miss Dunne, inclined to plumpness, had later started on a diet advertised to reduce weight within three months. She was eating her nuts when Leo arrived. "No breakfast, nuts at 11" being the menu for this morning. A bright fire and a glass of wine warmed Leo's chilled limbs, while she listened to the announcement of the birth of a son to some member of the aristocracy of whom she had never heard.

"That's their third in four years," Miss Blake added confidentially, laying down the paper.

"Well! What do people expect if they get married?"—Miss Caroline's anti-matrimonial views were well known.

Leo laughed. "Tell me, Miss Dunne—aren't the people about here rather—heavily married?—glued?"

Caroline nodded vigorously. "That expresses it neatly! When I look round upon their smug stiffness, I feel inclined to go off with a man."

"My dear Carrie!" ejaculated Rosalind. "Please don't! But what man?"

"Any man." Carrie cracked a nut viciously. "The grocer—the vicar—Tom Dickson——"

"I played golf with him, one day," Leo interrupted, with a stab of memory.

"So we heard." Rosalind smiled knowingly. "That's the butcher's knock. What shall I order for next week, Carrie?"

"Let me look at my diet sheet. . . . Monday: one banana, a few dates—fish. . . . Tuesday: a rusk—mussels. No meat for me until six-thirty on Wednesday. Please yourself, Rosy. . . . Yes, we heard about your game with Dickson."

"Lord—everybody seems to have heard!" Leo cried.

"Of course. You have only to sneeze for the news to fly around this hole. Freda Dawes told us; Arnold Kerry told her; Mr. Wood told him."

Rosalind returned just then, carrying a weekly illustrated journal.

"Here is the paper Katie sent this morning, Carrie. You wished to see the picture of that singer——"

Caroline seized it eagerly. "Miss Blake's cousin and his wife were in Switzerland this summer——"

"Switzerland!" The glass Leo was raising to her lips seemed to jump; she set it down hurriedly.

"And she dropped across a pretty little scandal that has not become public—yet," continued Caroline, smacking her lips and poring over the paper. "He's very good-looking—positively beautiful, the young devil! Enough to fascinate any girl who is fool enough to——"

"He was staying with a girl at the same hotel as my cousin," explained Miss Blake. "And he's married—lives apart from his wife. They left before Katie came downstairs the morning after her arrival. I suppose they dared not face English people."

Leo's voice, after eluding her through several attempts, returned. "Is—was she sure—sure they were living together there?"

"Oh, yes. She saw them in the same room."

Mechanically Leo took the journal held toward her. For a moment she saw nothing but a dark patch and a blur of print. Then, bracing herself as if for a leap, she looked deliberately at the pictured face. And a strange sensation swept across her—a sensation akin to homesickness. After long exile, something vital within her soul—so it seemed—recognized the landmarks of home and clamored to return there. Tumultuously the past, before the night on the Scheidegg Pass, flooded her mind, blotting out temporarily the little room and its occupants.

"Mr. Richard Valyran, the well-known young tenor, whose tour in South Africa is rivaling in success his tour in America." . . . She read the short paragraph through twice, then gazed again into the moody beautiful eyes; at the mobile lips and the strange ethereality of brow that even a press photograph could not hide.

All the bitterness had vanished from her heart as if it had never existed. "I understand—Val, I understand——" Something within uttered the words so clearly that she started, half-fearing they had been said aloud.

"I—I have heard him sing. This is very like him." She had forced out any remark that came to cover her absorption.

"If there is a divorce," remarked Rosalind, "and my cousins have to bear witness——"

"Divorce!" The paper slipped from Leo's hands to the floor.

"Divorce!" The paper slipped from Leo's hands to the floor.

"We shall go to court with them and hear it."

"But how could there be a divorce? I—I mean——" Leo stooped to pick up the paper. "People go about together often. That—that's no proof. Besides, his wife wouldn't divorce him unless she found somebody—so I have heard. I met him—during the war."

"Really? You actually know him?" Their four eyes almost dropped out of their two heads at thus being brought in touch with people behind the scenes.

"When Katie—my cousin-in-law—comes again, you must meet her," cried Rosalind, "and hear all about it."

"When is she likely to come?" Leo asked rather huskily.

"After Christmas. They are in the south of France now. She didn't like Switzerland, because German was talked so much there. Katie is very patriotic. She won't sit in the same railway carriage with a Hun."

"I always make a point of being polite to Germans, when we are abroad," remarked Caroline. "It would be terrible if we brought on the war again. Oh, must you go, Mrs. Wallis?"

Leo had risen, feeling she could bear no more. She had come with the intention of fixing up some golf; but she made hurried adieux and departed, without giving golf a thought.

Conscious of nothing beyond impotent anger, she drove at reckless speed down narrow lanes and round sharp corners.

"Cats!" she muttered. "Cats! . . . Cats!"

And Harry? . . . Three months ago, had the subject not been too painful, Leo could have talked freely to Harry about Val. Only the horror of disillusion, coinciding with Harry's bitterness over his sister, had prevented her doing so before their marriage. Now, however, she felt she could not. There were curious jagged rocks in his nature against which she bumped unexpectedly. Already these had caused too many small misunderstandings. Last night's scene had shaken her confidence. She dared no longer walk roughshod, trusting in her own point of view. She picked her way warily, conscious that their footsteps must be adjusted.

Nevertheless, a sudden curiosity over his views caused her to turn the car into the Cuvingham road and drive to the nearest news agent's, where she bought a copy of Miss Blake's journal.

It being Saturday, Harry returned home for lunch. Over their coffee by the fire in the big hall, Leo turned the pages of her paper, then handed it to her husband.

"I know that man—met him in the Army," she said with forced carelessness.

He glanced at the photograph without much interest.

"A singer?" he observed, in the tone of one inferring "a freak."

"He is married, but separated from his wife." She watched the slight curl of Harry's lip, and her heart sank. "Miss Blake's cousin saw him in—abroad with a girl at the same hotel. Miss Blake thinks it—it is a scandal. But why? They were—probably—only friends."

Harry laid down the paper with a laugh. "Most probably!" he said, with biting sarcasm. "It is the kind of—friendly action I associate with actors and their ilk."

Leo knew the cause of this bias. Nevertheless, a shadow of her previous anger urged her to protest. "You are not quite fair, Harry, to judge all by—by one. This man was—I liked him. I feel sure he was——"

"Trotting abroad with—only a friend? Eh? Laying down his cup, he rose with another laugh. "You have the most unsuspicious mind of anybody I know, Leo!" For a moment, as he passed her chair, he drew her head back against his chest and smiled fondly into her grave eyes. "It's refreshing. You strange little idealist! . . . Now—shall we take the dogs for a run?"

"I thought you wished to learn golf?"

"I haven't any clothes or clubs, yet."

"Clothes?" She glanced at him in some perplexity. But he had shouted "Walk!" to the sleeping dogs, and her words were lost in pandemonium.

"You are already a magistrate, a member of the District Council, and of the Parish Council, a churchwarden—oh, Harry! you are digging yourself in."

He laughed at the expression, so diametrically opposed to his own ideas. "Just the reverse, dear. I am getting out; proving by each fresh step that freedom of individuality can triumph over circumstance."

Leo understood the exultant note in his voice. "Yes," she agreed slowly, "I know what you mean. But—isn't there a danger of getting buried among new ones? One can be trapped without being aware of the fact. I'm rather afraid of that."

"I know you are," he said, holding out a hand to help her over a stile. "You are afraid of responsibility, Leo. But you must face it." He placed both hands on the top bar, and for a fleeting instant, she felt imprisoned. "Your responsibilities are here, too, now. I want you to join in parochial affairs; to take——"

She brushed aside his arm, and took a flying leap from the top of the stile. "Harry, I'm not—not made that way. Hello! Who is this?"

A motor-car stood, with open bonnet, in the lane they entered. The owner raised himself from his investigation of the engine at their approach, and came forward to Wallis with outstretched hand. He was big, with heavy features and small eyes, which scarcely glanced at Leo during their brief introduction.

Leo looked at the broad back turned toward her, and frowned. "Churl!" she thought irritably. "Why doesn't he introduce his wife? How mad she must feel!" She took a step toward the other woman; but the cold stare she received caused her to halt. Certainly, if hostility were to be the watchword, it should be obeyed. "But what is the matter with the people?" thought the girl, for the hundredth time since Susie's tea-party. Had she been convicted of some crime she could not have felt more ostracised. She failed to understand the class of man whose courtesy to woman is but an afterthought—if a thought at all.

Women's Hose

1—Origin of Hosiery:

The word hose or hosiery is derived from the old German "hosa" meaning breeches; it was used for any covering for the leg, and eventually acquired its modern usage. The earliest hose were cut out of cloth and sewed up in the desired shape. Knitting was the last of the textile processs to be discovered, and it is only about 400 years ago that the art of looping thread together into a fabric was invented, probably in Scotland. The first knitting machine was invented by the Rev. William Lee, of Nottingham, England, in 1589. Although it was a crude affair, it could do the work 500 times faster than the hand process. The English government put excessive duties upon the exportation of stocking machines, but in 1822 one was hidden in salt, and smuggled into Ipswich. This was the beginning of the hosiery industry in America, and Ipswich is the center of the hosiery trade today. American inventors revolutionized machines for knitting hosiery by developing the circular machine and the invention of the "latch" needle. The result has been to cut down the amount of skilled labor required, and also the expense. It is now possible to use five or six different kinds of yarn in a single stocking—the finer qualities where it shows and the heavier where the wear comes.

Quart of Water Cleans Kidneys

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Slamming the offerings of Murphy for a total of 13 hits, sliding around the bases in a manner befitting a big leaguer, and fielding like a Muesel, the El Cerrito Merchants, humiliated the W. S. McRacken baseball club by an 8 to 1 score at First street last night.

To give an example of how the Merchants did their stuff the following excerpt is taken from the first inning. Carson led off, and slammed a double. Bradley followed suit and scored Carson. Fox singled to left and scored Braldey, Van Arsdale was thrown out at first, Anderson flied out, Murray hit to second base, allowing Fox to score. Dolan was out at first. Three runs, four hits, no errors.

And so it goes. In the second, one run was scored and in the fourth and fifth they made three and one respectively. Few thrils were in evidence, unless a flock of doubles could be considered as such.

NEW STUDIO IS OPENED BY JOHN PARKER

John L. Parker has completed his "Ideal" photograph studio at 225 Twenty-second street. He has had a wide experience not only in conducting studios but in building them. He does not need an introduction to the people of Richmond as he worked here for six years. Parker has been located in Los Angeles for the last two years. As that city is the largest picture city in the world, it is obviously the best place to gain valuable experience in that line.

However, Parker thinks Richmond is "The Best in the West" and has returned here to stay. This is the third place that he has built in Richmond. He was formerly located at 1426 Macdonald avenue, but this place was sold to Mr. Burdon, and the place he occupied at 225 Twelfth street was purchased by John Ledberg.

FUND CAMPAIGN CLOSES WITH DINNER MEET

one man, but the entire sales organization as a whole.

Richmond has been sold to its citizens, and as chairman H. A. Johnston expressed it, there are many bigger things ahead of the city to handle in the future.

Just before the close of the meeting, the announcement was made that group pictures of the executive committee, each group that won honors, and the members of the honor divisions, would be taken today at 4:30 in front of the Lincoln school. These pictures will be framed and will be hung in the lobby of the new hotel at the time it is thrown open to the public.

NO PLACE FOR DEAD ONE.

After the members of the executive committee, and the different groups, which make up the entire organization had enjoyed their final dinner, the meeting was opened by chairman Johnston, who introduced as the first speaker, Charles B. Hamilton, of the Hamilton Hotel System, who will be the lessee and operator of the new hotel.

"I want to tell you fellows that a man who can't get enthused when he meets with a body of men such as this is a dead one and ought not to come into a city of this character. (Prolonged cheers) The outlook gets better every time I come here. I am sold on Richmond and want to assure you the hotel will be a big success. We checked up very carefully on Richmond before we made up our minds to come here, and I know we have not made a mistake. Neither have you made a mistake in investing your money in this project, as it is going to be a paying one. You will not realize for a long time how much benefit this hotel is going to be to your city. My younger brother, who is manager of the hotel at Riverside also looked this town over carefully, and he told me that I had not made a mistake. While we are not perfect, we want to assure you that it is our intention to give you a hotel service that will be 99 per cent."

NEW HOTEL MANAGER.

James Hamilton of Riverside, then took the floor and said he wanted to reiterate the statements that had just been made by his brother. I have come in here with my family. I am in love with your town and its prospects, and I feel that the new hotel here will be one of the best that the Hamilton Hotel System will have to operate.

HONORS AWARDED

Then came the group honors for the best work that had been done in the past twenty four hours. In division A, the prize went to group 2 of which John A. Miller was the head; in division B, honors were secured by group 5 of which W. W. Scott was the head; in division C, S. S. Clark, the head of group 7 won; and in division D, group 10 head by Harry S. Curry got the prize.

The division honors were won by Division B of which Harley R. Carter was the manager.

"The "goat" was captured by group 5 of which W. W. Scott was the head. This group is a part of division B of which Harely R. Carter was the general manager.

SALESMEN'S PRIZES

Prizes, in the shape of beautiful fountain pens were awarded by division managers to the salesman in their division who sold the largest amount of stock in the past twenty four hours.

In division A, H. J. Hennessey won, but stated he thought the man entitled to the prize was O. J. Ripley, and made the presentation to him.

In division B, J. A. Long secured the coveted honors.

In division C, W. A. Hislop was the winner.

In division D, the award went to Joe Reed, but he stated credit for the sales was really due Frank Silva, and the prize was handed over to the latter.

The honor salesman of the day on the executive committee was O. R. Ludewig, and his prize was a beautiful gold everchar[illegible] pencil.

CAMPAIGN HONORS

For the most successful work during the entire campaign honors were awarded as follows:

To group 2, headed by J. A. Miller, of division A, which raised $20,030.

To group 5, headed by W. W. Scott, of division B which raised $8,660.

To group 7, headed by Sydney S. Clark, of division C, which raised $19,580.

To group 10, headed by Harry S. Curry of division D, which raised $9,240.

In the division honors, the first prize was carried off by Division C, headed by Fred B. LaMoine, which raised $39,480, and the second honor was carried off by division A, headed by E. B. Bull, which raised $34,540.

The honor salesman of the campaign were H. J. Hennessey who raised $10,520, and Joseph Reed who took stock subscriptions to the amount of $9,790. Both of these honor salesmen were presented with gold watches.

The members of group 2 of division A, presented John A. Miller who was the head of the group with a fountain pen, as a token of appreciation of his untiring work during the campaign.

MANAGERS EXPRESS THANKS

All of the division managers, E. B. Bull of division A, H. R. Carter of division B, Fred B. LaMoine of division C and Harry Marcus of division D, all expressed their thanks to their group leaders and to the individual members of the different groups for their untiring and unselfish work during the entire campaign.

GOOD-BYES ARE SAID

A. C. Baum, one of the members of the Hockenbury system, who has done valiant work during the campaign, then said his goodbye to the campaign workers. "You have put it over and put it over big, and that it the one big test. You have sold Richmond to 594 people in your community. You have seen what you can do by pulling together. There were lots of people in this city, who said the job could not be accomplished. You are now in a position to knock the next knocker in the head. The result is very satisfactory, and I want to thank everyone for their aid in the great work that has just been completed."

BARR GIVES FAREWELL.

L. D. Barr, who has been in active charge of the hotel campaign work for the Hockenbury Hotel System was the next speaker. He said that after the acquaintances he had formed during his two months stay in Richmond, and just at a time when he was really getting to know the live wires of this city, it was indeed a hard matter to have to say good-bye. After making a survey of your city, I decided there was the real stuff here to put over a hotel. I guaranteed your executive committee that we would raise $150,000, we have done better. I told them there would be 600 subscribers to the hotel, and here we fell just six short I want to extend my thanks on behalf of the Hockenbury System. I want to congratulate you on the great work you have accomplished. The city is united, there is no faction, except a faction of builders, and that is what is needed. To a great extent the success of this campaign has been due to H. A. Johnston, your general chairman, his leadership has helped to put it across. To the members of the executive committee, the division managers, the group managers, and the individual salesmen, I want to congratulate you. The credit for this great success is not due to any one man but to the entire organization, from top to bottom.

CHAIRMAN JOHNSTON TALKS

"Now that the campaign is over" said chairman H. A. Johnston, and I have sat here this evening and listened to the many congratulatory statements, I want to say that I am

TUBERCULOSIS OVERCOME

Oakland, Calif. April 28, 1925.
For about three years I suffered from a bad cough and sore chest. I tried many doctors, all of whom pronounced my case Tuberculosis. My spittle was examined and showed tubercular germs. As I found no improvement from any of the treatments that I took, I decided to give the FONG WAN HERBS a test, as a last resort.
After having drunk the herbs for four months, I was a well woman and had gained in weight. A year has elapsed since I began to take the FONG WAN HERBS on April 16, 1924, but today, I am still well and have no sign of my former complaints.

WHY I CAME TO RICHMOND

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles by prominent Richmond business men giving a brief account of their business careers and reasons why they chose Richmond as the field of their business endeavors.

By W. S. McRACKEN,
Proprietor of the McRacken Men's Clothing Store 11th and Macdonald.

I came to Richmond in 1904 on the advice of a San Francisco wholesaler who told me of a store at Point Richmond that was for sale I was planning to go to Alaska at the time, but the advice of several business men coincided in favor of my taking advantage of the future of Richmond. Adam Grant, San Francisco millionaire, said to me, "I do not know anything about business conditions in Richmond at the present time, but I can assure you that it is at present a growing town and that it is bound to grow even more." He was a conservative Scotchman and I relied rather heavily on his judgement.

I felt quite sure of the future of Richmond at that time. The Standard Oil was located and Richmond was the terminal for the Santa Fe railway.

During the first few years that I was here I devoted all my attention to my store at the Point. I opened a branch in Richmond the year of the Johnson-Wolgast fight. It was located in the Annett building between Second and Third streets. During the time that I have been in business I have had two partners, Parker and Adkinson, at different times. I bought out Adkinson, my last partner, in 1918, and have kept the business in my name since then.

There is no doubt in my mind as to the future of Richmond during the next ten to twenty-five years. This town has all the commercial and industrial possibilities necessary for doubling its strength and business prestige in that time.

YOU MAY BE ASKED TOMORROW

Fund Campaign

happier than ever to say that I am a citizen of Richmond. We undertook a big job, we met the task and we have won. I want to extend to the different groups, the thanks of the executive committee. We are proud of you, you have done more than anything before accomplished in the past 20 years., We have found ourselves and will continue to go on. Our spirit has been aroused and there is nothing impossible for us to accomplish in the future so far as the city of Richmond is concerned. Again I wish to thank you.

"To Mr. Barr and Mr. Baum I wish to express my appreciation of their work. I have never before worked with men who have proved so satisfactory. I hate to see them go, and if our recommendation can do you any good anywhere, at any time, it will be our great pleasure to give them to you."

EXTENDS CONGRATULATIONS

"This campaign has brought out a wonderful spirit of co-operation, said E. M. Downer, a member of the executive committee, and president of the Richmond Community Hotel Inc. Every member of this campaign organization is to be congratulated for the great work just completed. It has been a valuable experience to all of us. The hotel will be a paying proposition, it is a good investment, and I want to assure you that I will make it my business to see that 100 cents is got by the people for every dollar that goes into the hotel building."

TILDEN PREDICTS SUCCESS

E. M. Tilden, one of the big property owners of Richmond then told of his first coming to Richmond over 20 years ago, and putting up at the Critchett hotel at the Point. It had always been his ambition to see a first class hotel erected in Richmond, and he was pleased to see that it was soon to become a reality. "Under the Hamilton Hotel System, this is going to be a paying investment," said Tilden, "and if there are any of you who do not want to keep your common stock, just come and see me and I will buy it.

CO-OPERATION OF S .O. CO.

Chairman Johnston then spoke of the great co-operation of the Standard Oil company in connection with the hotel project. Last Friday afternoon, the whistle was blown, men were called from their work, and campaign workers were permitted to address the men. This was wonderful for them to do, and goes to show what the Standard Oil company thinks of Richmond and its people. It is something that but few big corporations would do.

On motion of Charles S. Renwick, by a rousing affirmative vote of those present it was decided to send a letter of appreciation to the company head here, W. D. Mason, and the general manager, Joseph Brooks, thanking them for their aid in the campaign.

MAYOR PLATE PROUD

"We are all proud of the great work that has just been completed" said Mayor J H. Plate. "There were many at the start of this campaign, who were not so optimistic as to the outcome. Team work has accomplished wonders. The work for the betterment of the city has just started, but we now feel that there is nothing impossible in the future."

HELP THE CITY GROW.

"I am in Richmond because I like its people and the city" said C. S. Renwick "This proposition, when we first started it, looked big to us, but we have accomplished what many thought was the impossible. We are not going to stop with the new hotel, but the great work ahead of us is to make Richmond a first class city

TELLS OF FUTURE.

"It naturally makes me feel proud to think we have put this hotel project over, said Guy Wolf, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the hotel executive committee. When this campaign first started I ran across so many glooms, that they almost got my goat, but I am going to take great pleasure now, in hunting them up, and wave my fingers at them. There is a vast amount of work ahead of us. We lost three big industries in the past year on account of lack of water and harbor facilities. They are the General Petroleum company, the Richfield Oil company and the Johns-Manville company. Oakland got two of them and Pittsburg secured the other. We must see that our harbor is improved, and also do everything in our power to aid in bringing in an adequate supply of water.

SOME OF THE RECORDS

The records of the division and their groups as they were read at the final meeting last evening were very interesting.

Division A raised during the campaign $34,540, and this was represented by its different groups as follows: Group 1—$7,800, group 2, $20,030; group 3—$6,710.

Division B raised $21,750, and this was represented by its different groups as follows: Group 4—$4,950, group 5—$8,660, group 6—$8,140.

Division C raised $39,480, and this was represented by its different groups as follows: Group 7—$19,580, group 8—$15,720, group 9—$4,180.

Division D raised $15,730 and this was represented by its different groups as follows: Group 10—$9,240, group 11—$2,530, group 12—$3,960.

SOME HIGH SALESMEN

Some of the high records made by individual salesmen were as follows: H. J. Hennessey $10,520, Joseph Reed $9,790, O. J. Ripley $3,740, K. J. Henning $3,300, Dan Reardon $2,420 J. A. Long $2,310, Clyde Baker $2,255; John Rihn $2,200, A. C. Faris $2,200, W. A. Hislop, $2,200.

CLOSING CHEERS

The meeting came to a close with a snap and a bang and three rousing cheers were given, led by Bert Carter, for the Hockenbury system representatives for H. A. Johnston, for E. M. Downer and for the "whole gang." The meeting is one that will never be forgotten by those present.

HANLON IS SPEAKER AT LIONS MEET

County Superintendent of Schools William H. Hanlon, while speaking before the Richmond Lions club yesterday, made a strong defense of modern educational methods as opposed to a demand for a return of the three "R'S". What are sometimes termed the frills of modern education are very often a valuable addition to the educational system, Hanlon declared. The chairman of the day was J. O. Ford, member of the Richmond board of education. Lester Regalia, saxophone soloist provided musical numbers.

Santa Fe Buys Two More Tugs For Bay Service

The Santa Fe railroad will purchase two tugs from the shipping board to augment its fleet operating between Richmond and San Francisco and Oakland, according to announcement made yesterday following the return from New Orleans and Mobile of Captain W. J. Osborne and E. F. Callahan, the latter master mechanic at Richmond, who have been away for two weeks.

Extension of the present bay and river facilities for handling freight cars ferried between the Eastbay cities and San Francisco has been made necessary on account of the increased freight to and from San Francisco over the Santa Fe lines, it is understood.

Police Clear Up Juvenile Crime Ring

With the arrest of four youths who have been stealing automobiles, the local police believe that the juvenile crime wave that has swept the city for some time is at last checked. The four juveniles were arrested in Albany Saturday night upon being connected with the theft of four automobiles belonging to Richmond residents.

Upon questioning, the youths, who were riding in a car they had stolen, admitted stealing cars from E. Forwick, 1721 Garvin avenue, George Shinn, 634 Eleventh street, Mike Haaland, of Oakland, stolen from the Pullman shops; A. Rodriguez, 127 West Richmond avenue. All four cars were later returned to the owners.

Two Richmond youths, 15 and 13 years of age, were certified to the juvenile authorities at Martinez by Justice of the Peace John Roth yesterday, on charges of grand larceny. Two young boys of 10 and 12 years, stole a purse containing $19 from a locker of the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday, while the owner was in the gymnasium, and hid it under a rock near Standard avenue. The money was found by the older boys and spent, according to police.

All past presidents and officers of Alexandria lodge No. 217, Daughters of St. George of America, are going to Oakland on Friday afternoon, where they will attend a luncheon given at the Peerless cafe, in honor of Supreme President Emily B. Brown. Mrs. Brown is of Bristol, Connecticut, and this is her first visit to California so the Daughters of St. George lodges about the bay are planning a series of events to impress her with the hospitality of Californians.

Initiation was held at the meeting of the local lodge in Memorial hall last night. The rituals were performed by the officers of the organization, headed by President Florence Baker.
